“History of Hemophilia Care in Canada: Triumph and Tragedy”

Hemophilia is an important disease not only from the medical standpoint, it also unwittingly helped shape the European political landscape in the 20th century. Advances in hemophilia care over the last 60 years both in Canada and elsewhere have been truly medical and humanistic triumphs. These triumphs were peppered with tragedies, the most dramatic of which was HIV infection transmitted by treatment products. Yet the most significant triumph came out of the tragedy. This talk will highlight the history of hemophilia care through these times of triumph and tragedy and the contributions of many Canadians, a number of whom have been interviewed by the authors over the past two years.
