

Ian MacNairn is in his final, eighth year, in the University of Calgary's Leaders in Medicine program. He plans to graduate from the Cumming School of Medicine in the spring of 2022 as a 'tanuki.' He completed a PhD in sociocultural anthropology in 2019 and a MA also in sociocultural anthropology, before that, in 2012. Both anthropological degrees were done at the UofC. Ian's focus in medicine lies in rural and remote locales and their populations just as his research and personal adventures have. He plans to attend a rural Family Medicine residency program that will further his engagement with Indigenous communities and their ways of knowing and being. Ian likes mountains.